A critical element of professional policing is ensuring the response to resistance we use is appropriate, legal, within policy, reviewed for improvement and enhanced training and supervised. Below is an abbreviated summary of the instances of our response to resistance to arrest:

Officers were dispatched to the Metrolink station due to a highly intoxicated male that had been causing problems on a bus. The male was told to leave the Metrolink property by security but refused. When officers attempted to arrest him, he tried to pull away and escape their arrest efforts. Officers took him to the ground to prevent his resistance from escalating and to gain control of him. The male was arrested without further incident. No injuries.

Officers had arrested an intoxicated female for an Order of Protection Violation. The female became uncooperative during booking and had to be partially carried back to her cell as she fell to the floor and refused to walk. Once inside the cell she kept trying to walk out with the officers and had to be shoved back. No injuries.

Officers responded to a retail store for a report of a theft in progress. A male suspect was concealing merchandise on his person while being monitored, he became aggressive with an employee and assaulted them. Officers responded and the suspect was very aggressive towards the responding officer. The officer started to handcuff the suspect but the suspect aggressively turned back towards the officer. Fearing he would be assaulted the officer took the suspect to the ground to neutralize the suspect's ability to injure the officer. The suspect was arrested without injury to anyone.
